face a party which has not been so badly split since the nineteen twenties. The other candidates, now defeated, have not shown much inclination to work for the winner in the elections.

In some senses this is a new in some senses this is a new party that Senator McGovern has conjured up around him. The young and the black placed an-bounded faith in Senator Eugene McCarthy in the last election, and he failed them because he was not tough enough, or deter-mined enough to fight for the

In the primaries, and more particularly in the battles against his Democratic fellow candidates in the days and weeks leading up to the Convention, Senator McGovern has proved that he most certainly possesses this first essen-tial, determination, in good meas ure. The election system is not unjustified, for any man who is to be President of the U.S. at this time must be willing and able to fight his battles at home and abroad.

The outsider cannot tell how deep the changes go that have been wrought in America during the past years, by the disaffec-tion caused by a profoundly unpopular war, and partly by dis-couragement brought about by the incomplete absorption into ional Tabric of the bi whose emergence from the ghettos has instilled fear in the gnectos has institled fear in the hearts of those opposed to any emancipation, and demoraliza-tion among those who see their efforts for integration frustrated and rejected by both blacks and whites. "Stop McGovern" movement colapsed

Sen. Humphrey's pullout, on the heels of a strong McGovern showing at the Democratic presidential convention early yesterday, meant that only a political disaster could rob San. McGovern of victory.

The decision of the former Democratic Vice-President to bow out was expected to start a chain of withdrawals by other presidential contenders.

At a press conference later in the day Sen. Muskle announced he had withdrawn his candidacy, saying: "It is apparent to all of us that Sen. George McGovern is this convention's choice as the nominee of our party," He wished Sen. Mc-Govern every success and said "Let's now get going about the business of winning the presidency and governing wisely."

Unlike Sen. Humphrey, he pledged his support specifically to the obvious winner, Sen. McGovern.

Iran ignores rule of law, jurists say

GENEVA (UPI). - The International Commission of Jurists said yesterday military tribunals in Iran ignore the rule of law.

It said persons suspected of plotting against the regime are held by the secret police without coming to trial and without their families being informed.

"When they are eventually brought before a military tribunal the accused are told to select a defence counsel from an official list of 10 tames, themselves members of the armed forces," the Commission said. "The procedure of the tribunals is summary in the extreme and severity of the sentences seems out of all proportion to the charges made. "Out of 120 persons belonging to three subversive groups who were brought before military tribunals from mid-January, 28 had been ceived sentences varying from three "Their average age was 23." The Commission said international observers are not permitted to attend the trials.

Canadian Jews live

THE JERUSALEM POST

under U.S. impact

CANADIAN Jewry is one of the youngest of Jewish communities. It is also one of the communities on which the least has been written - the main exceptions being the history of Canadian Jewry by B.G. Sack (but that only goes up to the end of the 19th century) and the statistical studies by Louis Rosenberg. There are signs that Canadians have become aware of the lack of research into their own history and background, and beginnings are now being made in various direc-Rabbi Stuart E. Rosenberg, of Beth Tzedec Congregation in Toron-to, is the author of the recent twovolume "The Jewish Community in Canada" (published by McCielland and Stewart). This well-produced and highly readable work surveys the history of the Jews of Canada and then looks into their present situation and describes their partidipation in many fields of endeavour.

The newness of the Canadian com-The newness of the Canadian com-munity is illustrated by some figures. The first synagogue was founded in 1768 — but for 75 years it remain-se the only one. By 1841 there were only 145 Jews in all Canada and 20 years later there were less than 1,200, Even today the com-munity is basically a post-World War II creation with almost half of its members with foreign-born (alits members still foreign-born (although this proportion is now steadi-though this proportion is now steadi-ly diminishing). But this is part of the overall Canadian pattern in-asmuch as three million Canadians have arrived in the country since World War II, representing 50 sthnic

The Jews were essentially an east European community and this in-fluence has remained strong. The menting-pot concept was not the Canadian pattern as the country was dominated by two major cultures — the English and the French and there is no specific Canadian and there is no specific Canadian way of life and no easily defined Ca-nacianism. Although Canada is offi-cially a Christian country, all ethnic groups are encouraged to foster their life styles and subcultures and so, as Rabbi Rosenberg points out, all facets of Jewish communel life found asset accommodation found easy accommodation. Big Brother

But the overall factor in Canadian life, apart from the British-French position, is the impact of the U.S. Big Brother there on the door-step and his presence cannot be ig-nored for iong. Canadian culture is increasingly inflituted from the increasingly influence income the South. Canadian Jews turned to the U.S. even earlier than did the po-pulation as a whole. While other Canadians still clung to the Euro-pean connection, Canadian Jews realized the inevitability of the U.S. connection. This is fluentrated, for example, in the fact that many Jew-ish organizations — and especially ish organizations — and especially the religious ones — do not have Canadian head offices but receive their guidance from New York. Rabbi Rosenberg discerns the di-minishing influence of Montreal, until recently the unquestioned focus of the community. Its pre-eminence has been undermined by the he U.S. hut

Besides the Orthodox communities. there is a strong Conservative move-ment and recently (but only recently) Reform Judaism has made big strides. Increasingly, also among the Or-thodox, U.S.-born and trained rabbis have taken over. There is no modern rabbinical seminar in Canada. Canadian-born rabbis study in the U.S. (and most of them remain there)

Intermarriage

Canada is one of the few coun-tries where reliable Jewish statistics are available and it is possible to gauge the rise in intermarriage much more accurately there than in other countries. It emerges that, while the intermarriage rate in Ca-nada is much lower among Jews than among Protestants and Catholics, it is growing and is likely so to continue. It is not uniform throughout the country. Predictably it is at its lowest in Quebec where the intense ethnic awareness makes

Among Spanish-speaking people it is apparently a practice to appear in the concert hall up to three-quarters of an hour late and move leisurely to one's seat, oblivious to what is going on on the stage (which started only half an hour late). It is not so easy to opt out and disappear in Canada as in the U.S. Nor is there the same possibility to assimilate to other cultural models — the Jewish life style is regarded as just as Ca-nadian as any other and is part of the country's pluralist culture. But his contribution of three solo pieces by Albeniz did not raise the general level of the concert.

There was much music to be enjoyed, as many pieces were unknown and of considerable charm. The preparation of this programme surely must have taken up much time, energy and thought. The reading of Hebrew translations of some of the songs is basically a good idea. It is therefore regrettable that the results were so meagre. YOHANAN BOEHM

"JACOB'S Son" has both a com-fortable familiarity and something of a twist. It is very much another one of those loose memoirs about growing up in a Jewiah family in New York during the Desion. The new element is that the title character trades his environment for that of the farm.

Michael Berkowitz is repelled by the idea of following his late father as a Talmud Torah (afternoon Hebrew-school) teacher, is wary of entangling family alliances, is afraid of getting involved with the opposite sex, and, of course, is repressed by his mother. the need has been felt to evaluate in money terms the services the married, "non-working" woman con-tributes to the household, in comparison to the wages the man brings home. This is intended to raise the status of married women, in their own and everyone's eyes, and also it is of immense practical value in determining payments due to the housewife in divorce cases, after the marriage has broken down and the common household is to be terminated.

JUDGES IDEA Judges have so far determined payments due to divorced women mostly by using their own idea of what is supposed to be fair, by rule of thumb only, Judges take into consideration the husband's earn-ings, but seldom the wife's contribution to the common household. This has induced the Secretary of State for Social Affairs in Holland to ask the semi-official Dutch Family Council to organize an in-vestigation to provide guidelines for judges who have to determine how much the divorced husband should pay his former wife every month. The Family Council based its advice on an investigation conducted under the chairmanship of Prof. C.W. Visser of the Wageningen University into the monetary value of the housewife's job. This investigation fixed various sums as a just, although theoretical, payment to the housewife, based on the size of the family, the husband's earnings and the various tasks the housewife performed.

TECHNIQUE SIMPLE The technique used was simple. After estimating how many hours the housewife works as a cleaning woman, as a cook, as a seamstress, as a children's nurse, etc., this number was multiplied by the wages of a professional cleaning woman, cook, seamstress of average ability, after deducting a given percentage in view of the greater expert knowledge of the professionals. The Commission concluded that the non-working wife contributes on the average just under 40 per cent of the household's net income, and the husband's share is 60 per cent. This is, of course, an average. When the husband is a factory worker, earning low wages, his wife's con-

By SRAYA SHAPIRC Jerusalem Post Reporter

EL AVIV. - A Philistine emple has been uncovered on the orthern slope of Tel Kassila, in orth Tel Aviv, in the first three reeks of the renewed expedition nder Mr. Ami Mazar, of the lebrew University.

The Temple probably existed or 250 years until it was estroyed and burned down in he ninth century B.C.E. - most robably by King David's army. The site of the excavation was esterday visited by Ami Ma-ar's uncle, Prof. Binyamin Maar, who was the first archaeoloist to dig in Tel Kassila over 0 years ago, as well as Prof. Tigael Yadin.

This, and the temple in Bejan, are the only ones of the eriod found in a recognizable ondition, Mr. Ami Mazar told he press yesterday.

A perfectly preserved clay head f a swan was among the finds Ir. Mazar said it was a Philis ine emblem which is always seen t the prow of Philistine war-hips. It is also found on Egyptian lustrations of Philistine prison-

A trange clay vessel decorated with gurines of dancers was also bund, as well as a perfectly preerved bronze hammer. The dig lso turned up a basin holder re-resenting two lions.

The expedition is sponsored by Iuseum Ha'aretz, the archaeology epartment of the Hebrew Uni-ersity, and the Israel Exploration ociety. It is financed by the Mu-icipality. Helping in the digs for wo weeks were 20 young men com the American Institute of lolyland Studies in Jerasalem, nd next week 20 German stuin ents will take their place. They are all volunteers who pay or their own food and lodgings," ir. Mazar said. "We badly need

Wage pact in metal industry Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. - The Metal Workers Union has signed a collective wage contract with the Metal Branch Industries Section of the Manufacturers Association for 1972/73.

While the agreement maintains 1971's salaries schedule, it stipulates that a three per cent rise wil be paid in 1972 and another three per cent in 1973. The agreement also provides for rises in social benefits, such as the doubling of seniority pay from half a pound to H.1 a day per year's seniority in 1972 and to IL2 a day per year in 1973. The agreement also stipulates that a dismissed worker will get compensation equal to three weeks pay for each year on the job. The contract exceeds in some points the Ben-Aharon-Mosevice framework agreement. But it does not incorporate all the demands the metal workers presented, principally that workers who have been employed for a period of several years be put on With the signing, about half of all organized labour has signed wage contracts with the appropriate section of the Manufacturers Association.

'Conscientious objector' Neumann gets 8 months

TEL AVIV. — Giora Neumann, the 19-year-old youth who refu-sed to take an oath of allegiance to the army, stood at attention in his private's uniform at the Jaffa district military court yesterday and heard himself sentenced to eight months' imprisonment.

He was convicted of refusing to complete his induction into the army and swear allegiance to the I.D.F.

In reading the 45-minute-long verdict of the three-man tribunal Court President Sgan-Aluf David Gershon stressed that Neumann had never claimed that he was a "conscientious objector." His opposition to completing induction, court noted, stemmed from his conviction that the I.D.F., as an arm of the State of Israel, was an "army of occupation," carrying out repressive measures against the population in the Administered Areas in general, and in the Gaza Strip in particular.

But, the verdict went on, neither the accused nor his defence counsel, attorney Felicia Langer, had attempted to substantiate these charges. Moreover. 'Neuman had exploited the courtroom to voice shameful and baseless attacks on the State and its army," the court said. The very fact that he was allowed to speak without interruption and without fear of retribution - was

Vote on civil marriage bill after recess

Jerusalem Post Knesset Reporter The Knesset Presidium voted yesterday by six to two to postpone the vote on the LLP. civil marriage bill till after the summer recess.

By this move, they rejected the request of the bill's author, Mr. Gideon Hausner, to hold the vote before the Knesset rises on July 27 - and effectively put an end to the Coalition crisis over the bill. The Hausper bill had been debated on June 21. Manam's Dov Zakin proposed at the time, with the explicit consent of Mr. Hausner and the implicit consent of Labour, that the vote not be held that day. Mr. Zakin thus averted an immediate crisis

The danger of an Alignment as well as a Coalition split was finally removed on Monday when Mapam went over to Labour's view that the vote should be deferred till the coming Knesset term at the end of October.

In the Presidium, the six mem-bers representing Labour, Mapam and the N.R.P. secured the postponement, while two members of Gahai vainly objected. The majority argued that since the House Rules said nothing about setting dates for a vote on private bills, and all pre-cedents showed that the Presidium was supreme in similar cases, the matter should be put to a simple vote. by BEERSHEBA. -- The Municipality yesterday revealed further details about the steps it has taken to solve the town's sewage problem. (Resi-dents of the city's Neve Noy quarter demonstrated a fortnight ago in protest against "health hazards and municipal neglect," including the plague of mosquitoes emanating from the community's "open-sewer ditch" - Wadi Beersheba).

The spokesman said the Municipality had dug a six-kilometre-long drainage ditch parallel to the words, to speed up the flow of sewage. Also, extensive spraying operations bave been carried out against the mosquitoes.

To overcome the shortage of garbage collectors, the Municipality has hired workers from the Administered Areas, the spokesman said. New and cluding a machine for washing and disinfecting garbage trucks, at a total cost of IL214,000.
